BRUSH-ON LIQUID

BEST FOR: Getting a golden California-girl glow on your face (and neck and chest). Once brushed on, it dries in seconds, thanks to its thin, liquidy consistency, and it can be worn under—or in place of!—foundation.

TIP: For each area, pump one squirt onto the included kabuki brush, then buff and blend onto clean skin in small circular motions (don't forget your hairline and earlobes!). Repeat for a darker result.

Self-tanning pros spend a lot of time thinking about getting it on. (The product, that is.) They've cycled through sprays, rubber gloves, even special mitts in search of the world's best slather. And now one company claims that buffing tanner on with a makeup brush is the optimal approach. Spray di Solé's Sun Gelee Kit comes with an oversize Kabuki brush (dense, soft-bristled, about one and a half inches wide, and with a five-inch-long handle). You pump the tinted gel onto the brush and swirl it over your face and body in a circular motion, going back to buff out uneven spots as needed. "By blending with this type of brush, you won't get any streak marks like you could with your fingers or a mitt," says spray tanner Anna Stankiewicz of the OC61 salon in New York City. "And the gel formula dries in seconds, so it won't transfer to clothes and stain them or rub off when you cross your legs, like a lotion can." Because it has a bronze tint, it's easy to see if you've missed any areas.

Rather than misting us with a steady stream of solution, our technician worked on one small area at a time, spraying on a tinted formula, massaging it in and blasting it dry with a hose before moving on to the next spot. Her painstaking approach resulted in impeccable color that made our legs and biceps appear more toned—though standing spread-eagle for 45 minutes could have helped firm up those muscles, too. $65 and up.

When we entered this brand-new airbrushing spot, a friendly receptionist offered us tea and fresh scones—a nice touch, but hardly the meal to indulge in before stripping down to a paper thong. Still, our technician worked silently and efficiently, and the 15-minute airbrushing session flew by. Come morning, our skin had a tawny, uniform glow that made our thighs appear slimmer and our abs flatter—scones and all. $70.

NO-SMELL FAKE TANS A fake tan is the only safe tan but can leave you smelling like an old sock. Good news: Breakthrough odor-blocking technology lets you rock a faux glow sans stench. At the spa, try Spray di Solé's airbrush service (from $65). At home, use Jergens Natural Glow moisturizers ($8.99 each), reformulated with odor absorbers. Before you tan, exfoliate dry skin with a Laura Mercier scrub to ensure blotch-free color.

Base Don't fuss with foundation. Instead, get even with a bronzing self-tanner, says makeup artist Tonya Crooks, who prefers Spray di Solé. "It gives great coverage and won't drip or run." For a Photoshopped finish, use the brush included to apply in a circular motion. Then dot waterproof concealer over any remaining blemishes. *Spray di Solé Sun Gelee with brush, $50; spraydisole.com. Shadow Take time to layer your lids. Start with a primer, says makeup artist Matthew VanLeeuwen, who likes Nars Pro-Prime. Once it's dry, smooth on a cream color and set it with a powder shadow in a matching shade. Too much effort for you? Then stick to one neutral hue, like cocoa or pale

Fight Bloat

Sipping soda can expand your belly, says NYC dietitian Cynthia Sass: "The bubbles take up space in your stomach." Best bet: water with fruit or cucumber.

Not all veggies are created equal. Explains Sass: "Broccoli and onions produce gas," leading to bloat. Pre-beach, eat carrots or spinach.

"Chewing gum makes you swallow air," notes the S.A.S.S! Yourself Slim author. "The air stays in your gastrointestinal tract, making it swell." Eat mints instead!

Target Obliques

Lying down Megan Fox's pro Harley Pasternak suggests side planks: Lie on left side, legs straight and left arm tucked under at a 90-degree angle. Push forearm into ground and hips skyward. Hold for 30 seconds. Do three reps on each side.

Standing up Keeping hips still, rotate chest to the right and reach out left arm. Repeat on left. Do three sets of 30, says the Body Reset Diet author.

BEST NEW FORMULAS

Forget orange, smelly and streaky! Today's products have come far. New ingredients make for a super natural look, help color to fade evenly and provide skin-firming benefits, all sans odor.

Spray Formulas: Ideal for the body, these mimic the pro experience at a fraction of the price. Super-fine mists eliminate streaking and work at all angles.

Brush Application: Kabuki brush applicators are great for face because they provide a flawless, airbrushed finish.

Gel Formulas: On hot summer days, pre- or post-beach, a gel with a cooling effect is the way to go.

Q. Self-tanner fades faster on my face than on my body. How can I get them to match?

A. Your face's bronzed skin cells are buffed more often (by scrubs, rubbing on makeup and lotion), says L.A. bronzing pro Svetlana Feller. Get a boost with a facial glow lotion (like Jergens Natural Glow Face, $9). With just a touch of self-tanner, it redeposits the ideal amount of color.

The Spa at Equinox

1429 Second Ave., nr. 74th St.; 212-249-3917

For its initial foray into airbrush bronzing, this Spa at Equinox turned to L.A. studio Spray Di Sole, a favorite of LeAnn Rimes and other oft-bikini-clad celebrities. The collaboration netted an easy, odorless way to get tan quick: Stand in a sleek treatment room while an aesthetician mists you head to toe with an organic, aloe-vera-based solution that produces an earthy glow with realistic red undertones (versus Romney orange). The two-in-one spray gun simultaneously streams warm air for instant drying, so there's no need to "air out" afterward. Fifteen minutes and $70 later, you're on your way to pseudo-Californication.

How Celebs Get Healthy, Glowing Skin All Year Long

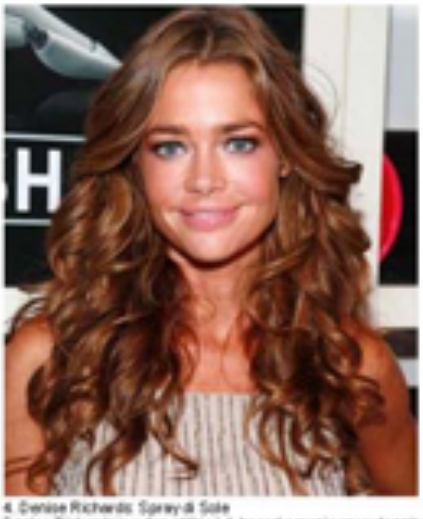

The inside scoop on 6 bronzed beauties' favorite spray-tanning methods.

Jené Luciani

We all know tanning is bad for us, but who doesn't love to have that golden glow? You can forget fake-baking under artificial lights. Sugar-based spray tans [1] that work with the body's natural chemistry are the newest way to get a natural-looking tan without the effects of harmful UV rays.

While orange palms used to be an indicator of a faux glow, the self-tanning industry has gotten so advanced that now, the lack of tan lines is the only way you can tell sun-kissed skin isn't actually from the sun. Some stars are even getting "sculpted tans," where the tanner is precisely applied to create the illusion of muscle definition in areas like abs and arms.

There's no doubt, celebs are at the fore-front of the faux tanning revolution. Many have a spray tanner come to their homes, visit a salon that offers the service weekly at upwards of $50 a pop, or use their favorite bronzing products [2] in-home. Paris Hilton reportedly even bought her own airbrush-tanning machine and had her assistant trained in how to use it. Here, we profile six bronzed beauties and get the scoop on their favorite spray-tanning methods.

4. Denise Richards: Spray-A-Tote

Denise Richards is a fan of this LA-based organic spray tanning company created by "Spray Tanner to the Stars" Svetlana Feiber. Feiber says her tans are known for being completely streak-free due to its unique brush-on method. Now, anyone outside of LA can have a Spray-A-Tote [3] tan too, as its products are now available for at-home use. Leann Rimes, Vanessa Hudgens, and Hilary Duff are also fans of the line.

THE BIG DEBATE

WHERE DO YOU STAND ON TODAY'S HOTTEST TOPICS?

Should states ban teens from tanning beds?

Wonder what the Jersey Shore GTL-ers would say

Lawmakers in at least 18 states are considering restrictions on the use of indoor tanning beds by teenagers, in hopes of stemming rising rates of melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer. But an estimated 2.3 million teens still use them annually. Should they?

The government should not meddle

It's a sign of government out of control. Parents can tell their children "no." We don't need suntan police.... Kids are more likely to get a sunburn laying in the sun.... More and more, we're seeing people who go to indoor tanning because they want the benefits of vitamin D. It makes you look better. It makes you feel better. And that's why so many people enjoy doing it.

— John Overstreet, executive director, Indoor Tanning Association

We are protecting the health of young people

Tanning beds have been classified as being carcinogenic, just like cigarettes. If minors are not allowed to buy cigarettes, why should they be allowed to go into a tanning bed? To me, it's about protecting the health of young people.... You can believe the studies done by the American Dermatological Association, or you can believe the studies done by the tanning industry.

— Illinois State Rep. Robyn Gabel (D-Evanston)

Holiday Glow Faker

"If your skin needs a summer boost, moisturise then smooth on Givenchy Mister Radiant Body, £32.50," says Amanda. "The beads pop on contact, releasing pearly pigments that make skin look fresh and plump. It's holiday skin in a tube – perfect for this depressing weather!"

GENIUS BODY MAKE-UP TRICKS

Ever wondered why celebrity bods always look so perfect on the red carpet? It's all in the art of clever cosmetics. Celebrity make-up artist Amanda Grossman spills the beans...

Sculpting Bronzer

"Spray di Solé Sun Gelee, £42, is by far the best fake tan product I've ever tried," says Amanda. "Worth every penny, it instantly gives skin a bronzed glow, which develops to a semi-permanent realistic tan. The buffing brush it comes with is genius, and you can also double-coat tummies and thighs for a sculpting effect."

Muscle Highlighter

"A sweep of Daniel Sandler Billion Dollar Body Shimmer, £20, literally transforms you. It highlights your best bits and fakes muscle definition. Sweep over your collarbones, shoulders and down limbs and watch your body tone up in front of your very eyes. Just make sure your skin is dry otherwise the powder will stick to the moisture, creating an uneven finish."

by Annabel Rivkin

Hair

Don't know about you but once the sun has (finally) got his hat on, my hair colour immediately lifts. Quite fun but also an indicator of parched cuticles and general damage. Face

When the rays start beaming, you need to make sure that antioxidants are powering through the dermis to activate your protection mechanism. The Sophyto range is certified by the UK Soil Association, which means it's as natural as you can get without rolling in mud. Its antioxidant serum has extracts of apple, tea and olive leaf.
Sophyto Anti-aging Antioxidant Serum, £31.89, at planetorganic.com

Body

Diet and exercise are one thing but coaxing your skin into looking its best will do you no end of poolside favours. Bio-Oil is famous for bashing away at stretchmarks, scars, uneven skintone and dehydration, thanks to the vitamins A and E, and PurCellin oil, which drags the goodness deep into the skin where it can really go to town.
Bio-Oil, £14.99, at boots.com

Skin

You don't want to smell like a vamp in high summer. What is irresistible in December is cloying and ageing in July. Bobbi Brown Bed (the clue is in the name) is summer-sexy, floral but fresh, with neroli, orange flower and jasmine. Best of all, it's highly concentrated and comes in a teeny clutch-sized apothecary bottle.
Bobbi Brown Bed Perfume Oil, $70 (bobbibrowncosmetics.com)

Tan

The new Spray di Sole Sun Gelee is convincing stuff: a sheer, brush-on fake tan that dries in seconds and develops over eight hours. You need only a few drops – polished on with a fat kabuki brush – for a radiant tan. No streaks, and no stained palms. Plus, it's organic and vegan, so virtuous and non-pore-clogging, too.
Spray di Sole Sun Gelee set, £42, at victoriahealth.com

Ollie Locke Tooting Bec Lido

The Made in Chelsea star does his summer wooing under cover of darkness and is more macho than you think

Why did you choose Tooting Bec Lido?
It's the biggest pool I've ever seen in my life, and all the colourful doors are very 1950s Blackpool. God, that makes me sound gay.
What do you most look forward to about summer in London?
Suddenly the sun comes out and all these attractive people emerge. One hot day and the King's Road turns into Rodeo Drive.
